Veterinary Technician Appreciation Week

October 18 - 24 is National Veterinary Technician Week

Follow along with us that week on social media to get some behind the scenes photos and explanation of what our outstanding veterinary technicians do.

If you had a particular interaction with a Veterinary Technician that made your visit special, please let us know. We would love to hear!

A note to all Veterinary Technicians:

Veterinary technicians are the heart of the veterinary team. Often called the "nurses of veterinary medicine," they do so much more than meets the eye—from drawing blood and placing IV catheters to monitoring anesthesia, administering medications, assisting with procedures, running diagnostics, caring for hospitalized patients, and educating pet parents. Most importantly, they provide comfort and compassion to our patients when they need it most.

This Veterinary Technician Appreciation Week, we want to recognize the incredible knowledge, dedication, and heart our veterinary technicians bring to work every day. They are advocates, caregivers, problem-solvers, and an essential part of providing exceptional care to every patient. Thank you to our veterinary technicians for everything you do—we truly couldn't do it without you! 🐶🐱💙
